

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
DISTRICT OF MINNESOTA

JOSE HERNANDEZ,

Case No. 14-CV-4958 (JNE/TNL)

Petitioner,

v.

REPORT AND RECOMMENDATION

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

Respondent.

Petitioner Jose Hernandez, a prisoner at the Federal Correctional Institution in Sandstone, Minnesota, has filed a petition for a writ of habeas corpus under 28 U.S.C. § 2241. In his habeas petition, Hernandez challenges the validity of a federal conviction and sentence incurred in Georgia. This Court, however, lacks jurisdiction to consider Hernandez's habeas petition, as his challenge should have been brought in a motion under 28 U.S.C. § 2255 in the district of conviction. Accordingly, this Court recommends that his petition be summarily dismissed without prejudice pursuant to Rule 4 of the Rules Governing Section 2254 Cases in the United States District Courts.<sup>1</sup>

I. BACKGROUND

Hernandez has provided little information in his habeas petition about his underlying conviction, and the Court has had difficulty locating information about Hernandez's criminal case. That said, it appears that Hernandez was charged with conspiracy to manufacture,

<sup>1</sup>Rule 4 provides that "[i]f it plainly appears from the petition and any attached exhibits that the petitioner is not entitled to relief in the district court, the judge must dismiss the petition and direct the clerk to notify the petitioner." Although Hernandez seeks relief under § 2241, the Rules Governing Section 2254 Cases nevertheless apply here. See Rule 1(b).

distribute, dispense, or possess (with intent to manufacture, distribute, or dispense) marijuana in violation of 21 U.S.C. § 841(b)(1)(A)(vii) and 21 U.S.C. § 846.<sup>2</sup> See ECF No. 3 at 4. The government filed an information before sentencing establishing Hernandez's prior conviction for a drug offense. See 21 U.S.C. § 851. This increased the minimum sentence to which Hernandez was subject from 10 years' imprisonment to 20 years' imprisonment. See 21 U.S.C. § 841(b)(1)(A). Hernandez was sentenced to this 20-year minimum sentence. See ECF No. 3 at 4. At sentencing, the trial court also determined that Hernandez was a career offender under § 4B1.1 of the United States Sentencing Guidelines. It does not appear that this finding had any effect on Hernandez's sentence, however, because Hernandez was given the lowest possible sentence available to the sentencing court. The Eleventh Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed Hernandez's conviction and sentence on appeal. Id.

Hernandez makes two challenges to his conviction and sentence in his habeas petition. First, Hernandez argues that the sentencing court's finding that he had previously committed a drug offense — a finding which increased Hernandez's minimum sentence from 10 years' imprisonment to 20 years' imprisonment — violated the Supreme Court's recent decision in Alleyne v. United States, 133 S. Ct. 2151, 2155 (2013) (finding that "any fact that increases the mandatory minimum is an 'element' that must be submitted to the jury."). Second, Hernandez argues that the sentencing court's finding that he qualified as a career offender violated <sup>2</sup>Hernandez states that he entered a "plea to guilty of Count 1 containing 21 U.S.C. § 846(b)(1)(A)(vii)." ECF No. 3 at 4. This provision does not exist; it is more likely, given the description of the crime provided by Hernandez, that he pleaded guilty to § 841(b)(1)(A)(vii) and § 846.

Descamps v. United States, 133 S. Ct. 2276 (2013), which clarified the sources of information courts may use when determining whether the career-offender enhancement applies.

II. ANALYSIS

“A federal inmate generally must challenge a conviction or sentence through a § 2255 motion.” Lopez-Lopez v. Sanders, 590 F.3d 905, 907 (8th Cir. 2010) (citation omitted).

Therefore, “[i]t is well settled a collateral challenge to a federal conviction or sentence must generally be raised in a motion to vacate filed in the sentencing court under § 2255 . . . and not in a habeas petition filed in the court of incarceration . . . under § 2241.” Hill v. Morrison, 349 F.3d 1089, 1091 (8th Cir. 2003). Federal district courts lack jurisdiction to hear a federal prisoner’s collateral challenge to his original conviction or sentence brought in a habeas petition unless the prisoner demonstrates that the remedy provided by § 2255 is inadequate or ineffective to test the legality of his detention. See 28 U.S.C. § 2255(e) (“An application for a writ of habeas corpus [on] behalf of a [federal] prisoner . . . shall not be entertained . . . unless it also appears that the remedy by motion is inadequate or ineffective to test the legality of his detention.”); DeSimone v. Lacy, 805 F.2d 321, 323 (8th Cir. 1986) (per curiam). The “inadequate or ineffective remedy” exception is sometimes called the “savings clause,” see Abdullah v. Hedrick, 392 F.3d 957, 959 (8th Cir. 2004), because, when it applies, it can “save” a habeas petition from being dismissed under the § 2255(e) exclusive-remedy rule.<sup>3</sup>

<sup>3</sup>If a petitioner failed to raise a claim in a prior § 2255 petition, he may not then present his claim under § 2241 in order to circumvent the limitations on second or successive § 2255 petitions. See United States v. Lambros, 404 F.3d 1034, 1036 (8th Cir. 2005) (“It is well-established that inmates may not bypass the authorization requirement of 28 U.S.C. § 2244(b)(3) for filing a second or successive § 2254 or § 2255 action by purporting to invoke some other procedure.”); see also United States v. Lurie, 207 F.3d 1075, 1077 (8th Cir. 2000) (continued...)

Hernandez acknowledges in his habeas petition that he is challenging the validity of his conviction and sentence. See ECF No. 3 at 2-4. He also acknowledges that, generally speaking, such a challenge must be raised through a motion brought under § 2255 under the exclusive-remedy rule. See id. Nevertheless, Hernandez argues that § 2255 is inadequate or ineffective in this case, and he urges that this Court consider the merits of his habeas petition.

The Supreme Court has not adopted a specific test for when a prisoner may invoke the savings clause, but several circuit courts have established such tests. Those tests almost always require that, where a petitioner seeks to invoke the savings clause, the petitioner must show (among other things) that he seeks to apply (1) a new rule of law that (2) has been found to apply retroactively. See, e.g., Bryant v. Warden, FCC Coleman-Medium, 738 F.3d 1253, 1274 (11th Cir. 2013) (requiring that the petitioner establish that “the new rule . . . applies retroactively on collateral review . . . .”); Reyes-Requena v. United States, 243 F.3d 893, 903 (5th Cir. 2001) (“The standards that these courts have articulated for the savings clause may not be framed in identical terms, but the following basic features are evident in most formulations: actual innocence and retroactivity.”); In re Davenport, 147 F.3d 605, 611 (7th Cir. 1998) (noting the “obvious” qualification that “the change of law has to have been made retroactive by the Supreme Court” for the savings clause to apply). Moreover, although the Eighth Circuit has not itself set forth a specific test as to when the savings clause should apply, it has made clear that § 2255 cannot be deemed inadequate or ineffective where the new rule from which the petitioner (citing In re Davenport, 147 F.3d 605, 608 (7th Cir. 1998) (“[I]t can’t be right and would nullify the AEDPA limitations if a prisoner, prevented from obtaining relief under § 2255, could simply turn to § 2241 . . . .”). Hernandez indicates in his petition that he has already once moved for relief under § 2255. See Petition at 4 [ECF No. 1].

seeks to obtain relief does not apply retroactively. United States ex rel. Perez v. Warden, FMC Rochester, 286 F.3d 1059, 1062 (8th Cir. 2002).

The threshold question this Court must therefore address is whether the rules announced in Alleyne or Descamps apply retroactively. If those cases do not apply retroactively, then Hernandez cannot avail himself of the savings clause, and § 2255 is the exclusive remedy for Hernandez to bring his challenge. And if § 2255 is the exclusive remedy available to Hernandez, this Court lacks jurisdiction over Hernandez's habeas petition, as any motion under § 2255 should have been brought in the district of Hernandez's conviction.

First, as to Alleyne: There is nothing in the case law to suggest that Alleyne should apply retroactively. Indeed, exactly the opposite is true. “[N]either Alleyne itself nor any later Supreme Court decision holds that Alleyne is retroactive.” Jeanty v. Warden, FCI-Miami, 757 F.3d 1283, 1285 (11th Cir. 2014). There is abundant authority on which this Court can reasonably conclude that the Eighth Circuit would find that Alleyne is not retroactive as Alleyne is explicitly an extension of Apprendi v. New Jersey, 530 U.S. 466 (2000), see Alleyne, 133 S. Ct. at 2163, and “the Eighth Circuit has consistently held that Apprendi and its progeny are not rules of watershed magnitude and has declined to apply those cases retroactively.” Burton v. Fabian, 612 F.3d 1003, 1010 n.4 (8th Cir. 2010). Further, each of the courts to have considered the specific question has found that Alleyne does not have retroactive effect. See, e.g., United States v. Reyes, 755 F.3d 210, 212 (3d Cir. 2014); In re Payne, 733 F.3d 1027, 1029-30 (10th Cir. 2013); Simpson v. United States, 721 F.3d 875, 876 (7th Cir. 2013); Dunklin v. Wilson, No. 13-CV-2411 (PJS/JSM), 2014 WL 5464250, at *4-5 (D. Minn. Oct. 27, 2014); Willis v. United States, No. 13-CV-2059 (JNE/JSM), 2014 WL 3384678, at *5 (D. Minn. July 10, 2014).

This Court agrees with the consensus on the question of retroactivity and finds that Alleyne does not apply retroactively unless the Supreme Court declares otherwise. Generally, new rules of law are not retroactive on collateral review unless they fall within one of two narrow exceptions. The rule must either put certain “primary, private individual conduct beyond the power of criminal law-making to proscribe,” or it must be a “watershed rule[] of criminal procedure.” Teague v. Lane, 489 U.S. 288, 311 (1989) (quotation omitted). The rule announced in Alleyne does neither. Alleyne does not place the conduct for which Hernandez was convicted outside the purview of the criminal law; Hernandez’s conduct remains just as unlawful today as it was when he was convicted and sentenced. See 21 U.S.C. §§ 841 & 846. Nor is Alleyne a watershed rule of criminal procedure for purposes of this analysis. As explained above, it is merely an extension of the Supreme Court’s previous holding in Apprendi. See Simpson, 721 F.3d at 876; Willis, 2014 WL 3384678, at *5 (collecting cases). Because Alleyne does not apply retroactively, that case cannot justify the invocation of the savings clause.<sup>4</sup>

Second, as to Descamps: Although the question has not been confronted as frequently as the application of Alleyne, several courts have concluded that the Supreme Court did not make Descamps retroactive on collateral review. See Groves v. United States, 755 F.3d 588, 593 (7th Cir. 2014); Wilson v. Warden, FCC Coleman, 581 Fed. App’x 750 (11th Cir. 2014) (per <sup>4</sup>In any event, Hernandez’s Alleyne argument fails on the merits. “Alleyne’s statement that facts increasing a mandatory minimum sentence are elements to be submitted to the jury did not overrule the [Supreme] Court’s prior holding in [Almendarez-Torres v. United States, 523 U.S. 224, 239-47 (1998)], that a prior conviction is not an element of an offense.” United States v. Rucker, 545 Fed. App’x 567, 573 (8th Cir. 2013). Accordingly, no violation of Alleyne occurred when the sentencing court found that Hernandez had committed a prior drug offense, thereby increasing Hernandez’s minimum sentence from 10 years’ imprisonment to 20 years’ imprisonment.

curiam); Whittaker v. Chandler, 574 Fed. App'x 448 (5th Cir. 2014) (per curiam); Dunklin, 2014 WL 5464250, at *5; Snyder v. Wilson, No. 14-CV-2047 (PAM/LIB), 2014 WL 3767845, at *5 (D. Minn. July 31, 2014). Hernandez cited no authority for the proposition that Descamps applies retroactively, and this Court has discovered no such case.

This Court follows suit with those courts that have considered Descamps in finding that it does not apply retroactively. It is doubtful that Descamps announced a “new” rule at all. See United States v. Montes, 570 Fed. App'x 830, 831 (10th Cir. 2014) (per curiam) (“[T]he Descamps decision did not recognize a new right. . . . The Descamps opinion simply applied existing doctrine.”). Consequentially, this Court cannot find that Descamps announced a new “watershed” rule. In short, “there is no conceivable basis upon which Descamps could meet the retroactivity test set forth in Teague v. Lane.” See United States v. McGee, No. H-04-067-1, 2014 WL 2434186, at *3 (S.D. Tex. May 27, 2014) (citation omitted).

Because neither Alleyne nor Descamps applies retroactively, Hernandez cannot cite those cases as a rationale for seeking habeas relief in this District. The “savings clause” fails to save Hernandez’s habeas petition, and this Court lacks jurisdiction over that petition pursuant to the exclusive-remedy rule. See DeSimone, 805 F.2d at 323. And because the Court lacks jurisdiction over the habeas petition, this action must be dismissed without prejudice.

III. RECOMMENDATION

Based on the foregoing, and on all of the files, records, and proceedings herein, IT IS HEREBY RECOMMENDED that:

1. Petitioner Jose Hernandez's motion for relief under 28 U.S.C. § 2241 [ECF No. 3] be DENIED WITHOUT PREJUDICE FOR LACK OF JURISDICTION.
2. This action be DISMISSED WITHOUT PREJUDICE.
3. Hernandez's application to proceed in forma pauperis [ECF No. 2] be DENIED AS MOOT.

Dated: December 29, 2014
